3 次の英文は，誠（Makoto）が，海外に住む日本人の数の変化について，グラフ（graph）と表（table）を作り，英語の授業で発表したときのものです。1～3の問いに答えなさい。

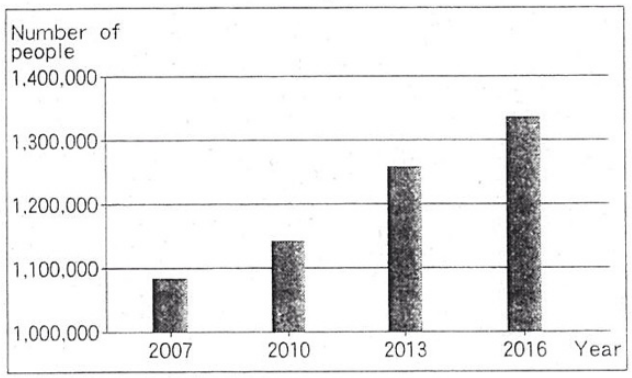

Last week, I watched a TV program about Japanese people living abroad. In the program, I learned that the number of Japanese living abroad became over 1,300,000 in 2016. After I watched the program, I used the Internet to learn more. I found a report called "Statistics on Japanese Nationals Overseas".

Look at the graph. The graph shows the number of Japanese living abroad in 2007, 2010, 2013 and 2016. You can see that the number of Japanese living abroad became larger. I was surprised to find that the number of Japanese living abroad changed in this way.

Now look at the table. This table shows the number of Japanese living in five countries (America, Australia, Canada, China and Thailand) in 2007 and 2016. You can see that the number of Japanese living in the five countries became larger. Let's look at the numbers in each country. The numbers of Japanese living in America in 2007 and 2016 were the (①) among the five countries. The numbers of Japanese living in China in 2007 and 2016 didn't change very much. Among the three other countries (Australia, Canada and Thailand), Thailand and Canada had about the same number in each year.

The report says that there are many Japanese companies in foreign countries now. Because of this, I think that more Japanese people live abroad now.

Graph

4 次の英文は，中学生の健太（Kenta）が，アリ（ant）の研究を通して学んだことについて，英語の授業でスピーチをしたときのものです。1～6の問いに答えなさい。

Do you like insects? I'm sure some of you don't like them. But I have been very interested in them since I was little. I kept many different kinds of insects when I was an elementary school student. One day, I found a book about ants in my city library. The book taught me a lot of interesting facts about them. Since then, I have enjoyed watching them and have learned more about them from the Internet. Today, I'd like to talk about ants.

You can find ants in many places around you in daily life, right? In Japan, there are about 280 different kinds of ants. And in the world, there are more than 10,000 different kinds of ants. Ants are called 'social insects' because they live together and each of them has its own role in the colony. "Colony" means a group of ants.

There are three kinds of ants — queen ants, worker ants and male ants — in the colony. Now I'm going to tell you about the characteristics of each ant. Look at the picture. The first one is a queen ant. There is usually one queen ant in each colony. It has wings and it is bigger than the other ants. It lays a lot of eggs. The next one is a worker ant. There are a lot of worker ants in the colony and all worker ants are female. They do almost all the work. Usually, young worker ants work in the nest. They take care of their babies, keep their nest clean and make their nest bigger. Some of them protect their colony from enemies. Old worker ants find food and bring it back to the nest. The last one is a male ant. Male ants have wings like queen ants. They fly in the sky to mate with queen ants. This is the only job they do. Each ant does its own job and helps its colony.

There are some mysterious facts about ants. First, ants can return to their nest after they walk far away from it. How? They put pheromones on the ground when they are walking. And they learn which way (①) by the pheromones. So, they never lose their way. They also use several pheromones for communication. They understand which ants come from the same colony by the pheromones. Second, some ants take care of the babies of one kind of butterfly. Why? The reason is that the babies give the ants a special juice. The juice is one of the ants' favorite foods. Both the ants and the butterflies benefit from each other. Even small insects live together and help each other. I think this is amazing.

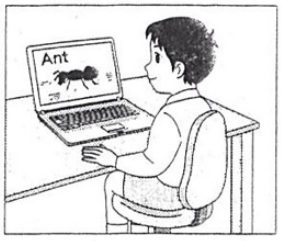

One day my mother said to me, "We should learn from ants. I mean we should help each other to live better lives like ants." I think she is right. Ants know what to do to make their lives better. They even know how to live with different kinds of insects. My mother's words teach me that even small insects give us important ideas.

There are many people in the world. They have different cultures and speak different languages. If everyone tries to help each other like ants, (②). There are still many things I don't know about ants. So in the future, I want to be a scientist and study more about the wonderful world of ants and other insects. Thank you for listening.
