3 次の英文は，誠（Makoto）が，いくつかの国における1日の一人あたりの野菜の平均摂取量について，インターネットで調べて表（table）とグラフ（graph）を作り，英語の授業の時間に発表したときのものです。1～3の問いに答えなさい。

Last week, my mother taught me that our body needs 350 grams of vegetables a day. I didn't think that I ate so many vegetables every day. So I used the Internet to find out how many grams of vegetables people in Japan and people in other countries eat a day on average per person.

First, look at the table. The table shows how many grams of vegetables people in five different countries ate a day on average in 2007. Japanese people ate more vegetables than people in Australia and people in India. But people in America and people in Korea ate more than Japanese people. I was surprised to find that Japanese people ate only about a half of the vegetables that people in Korea ate.

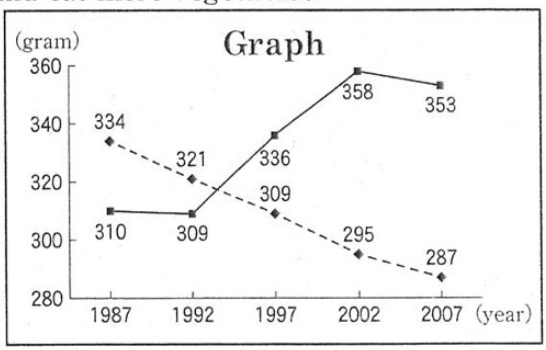

I was especially interested in America because I thought they didn't eat so many vegetables. So I made a graph to show how many grams of vegetables one American person and one Japanese person ate a day on average from 1987 through 2007. In 1987 Japanese people ate more vegetables than American people, but ten years later American people ate much more vegetables than Japanese people.

After making this graph, I said to myself, "Why did the grams of vegetables American people ate (①) so much from 1992 to 2002?" And then, I found a movement called '5-a-day' on the Internet. The movement started in America, and became popular in 1991. '5-a-day' means "Let's eat five dishes of vegetables every day." I think this movement worked well in America.

So, why don't we learn about '5-a-day' and eat more vegetables?

Table

Country	Gram
1	589
2	353
Japan	287
Australia	273
3	191

Takuya : I do. I have many dreams for the future. But I haven't decided what I'd like to be in the future yet. I've played baseball for many years, so I want to be a baseball player in America like Ichiro. I want to become a lawyer, too. I believe it is important to work for human rights and to help people who are in trouble. But my parents tell me that I should be a (②s) because I like science very much. I think that's not a bad idea because I'm interested in problems about the environment, food and animals in nature.

Mr. Brown : That sounds great, Takuya. Your future will be bright. Yuki, how about you? Do you have anything you want to be in the future?

Yuki : Yes, I do. I've wanted to be (③) since I was a child. I'd like to travel in space and watch the beautiful Earth, the moon, and a lot of stars.

Takuya : Wow! You have a big dream, Yuki. If your dream comes true, I'll be proud of you because you will be the first Japanese woman who has traveled in space.

Yuki : Thank you, Takuya. But I won't be the first. There are two Japanese women who have already traveled to space.

Takuya : Really? I didn't know that. Then, what will you do if you can go to space? Only watch the Earth and stars? Why don't you do some interesting experiments too?

Yuki : That's nice. But what kind of experiments shall I do?

Mr. Brown : If Takuya can be a (②s), he will be able to discover something new to solve problems about the environment or food. Then Yuki, you will travel to space and you can do many experiments and help Takuya to check his new ideas in different ways in the ISS.

Takuya : That will be exciting! Do you have any good examples, Mr. Brown?

Mr. Brown : Well, I read an article about a 'cherry tree from space' in the newspaper a few months ago. I hope both of you can get some ideas for your future plan from this story.

Yuki : A 'cherry tree from space'? How interesting! Please tell us about the article.

Mr. Brown : Sure. In November 2008, many seeds from different kinds of cherry trees were sent to the ISS from Japan. These seeds in the ISS moved around the Earth 4,100 times for about eight months and came back to the Earth in July 2009 with (③), Koichi Wakata. Then some of these seeds were planted at a temple in Gifu four years ago and one tree has grown. On April 1, 2014, nine flowers were seen from the four-year-old 'cherry tree from space'. One of the people working for the temple said, "(④)" Others were also surprised because it usually takes about ten years to see some flowers from a cherry tree after planting a seed.

Takuya : Why did the 'cherry tree from space' have flowers earlier than normal cherry trees?

Mr. Brown : I don't know why. The newspaper says nothing about the reason. So I told you that both of you can get some ideas for your future plan from this story.

Yuki : Oh, I see what you mean. Takuya, let's go to the temple to see the cherry tree now! I cannot drive a spaceship yet. So let's go there by bike. OK?

Takuya : Yes, Captain Yuki!

これから読む英文は，中学生の美貴（ Miki ）が，夏休みに参加したオーストラリアでの語学研修についてスピーチをしたときのものです。この英文を聞いて，(1)，(2)の問いに答えなさい。なお，英文は２回読みます。

英文を聞く前に，まず，(1)，(2)の問いを読みなさい。

では，始めます。

Last summer, I went to Australia to study English for two weeks. There were many students from different countries in the class. We studied English together and talked a lot in English. Some students were really interested in Japan and often asked me many questions about Japan.

At first, I felt it was easy for me to answer simple questions, for example, "Do you eat sushi every day?" or "Have you ever climbed Mt. Fuji?" But when they asked me difficult questions about Japanese culture and Japanese history, I could not say anything. I thought I was able to answer every question about Japan because I was born in Japan and grew up there. I felt sorry because I could not tell them the things they wanted to know. Then, I found that it was important to know more about my own country.

So now, I am studying English and also studying a lot more about Japan. I am looking forward to going abroad again and telling people more about Japanese culture and Japanese history in better English.
